Use whilst trying to conceive:

An acidic pH in the vagina has a negative effect on sperm and, consequently, on fertility. If trying for a baby, Animé Lubricant® should not be used during ovulation, as it has a pH of between 4.8 and 5.1.

During this phase, we recommend that couples trying to conceive use Prefert® Vaginal Gel for lubrication purposes and in order to optimise fertility. Prefert® Vaginal Gel is also available in pharmacies or online.

Animé Lubricant is available in pharmacies and at specialist retailers.

Ingredients: Aqua, alcohol denat., vegetable glycerin, hydroxyethyl cellulose, sodium benzoate, lactic acid, sodium, hyaluronic acid.

Properties:
Adhesive viscosity, non-flowing, pH between 4.8 and 5.1

Free of parabens, silicones and animal components. Dermatologically tested. Water-soluble lubricant.

Suitable for HER and HIM

Animé Lubricant Gel has a stimulating effect and makes sex more enjoyable and pleasurable.

Its composition, which includes hyaluronic acid, makes it extremely kind to the skin. It provides moisture and nourishes the upper layers of the skin at one and the same time. It does not stain the skin or leave any residues behind, is also water-soluble, colourless and odourless. In addition, it is also free of parabens and silicones.

Suitable for vaginal and anal use. Compatible with condoms made of natural latex, polyurethane and polyisoprene as well as with aids and products for sexual stimulation.

For external use only.

How to use Animé Lubricant?

Using Animé Lubricant is extremely easy: The required amount is applied directly to the skin or, using the fingers, to the desired spot. Once applied, Animé Lubricant provides for rapid moistening and relief of unpleasant irritation as well as for better lubrication. It is intended for temporary and external use.

„Animé aids, stimulates and encourages enjoyable lovemaking.“

Why make a lubricant with hyaluron?

Hyaluronic acid is an endogenous substance and is one of the most important structural elements in our skin. It gives tissue and organs their shape, provides elasticity and, at the same time, acts as a water reservoir. Chemically, it is a so-called polysaccharide (complex sugar) and can be found in between tissue cells.

Hyaluronic acid makes sure that water and nutrients reach tissue. Because it is able to absorb up to 600 times its own weight in water, it is of great importance when it comes to the regulation of tissue moisture. When hyaluronic acid is applied, the skin is kept firm and elastic, especially vaginal connective tissue.

Hyaluronic acid also actively supports the wound-healing process of the skin. It has been used in cosmetics, for burns as well as for knee joint treatment for years. Unpleasant burning and itching are relieved, and infections occur less frequently. There are no known allergies to hyaluronic acid to date.
